Often, it's important to maintain a particular style when replacing an entrance door, something that will blend sympathetically but also enhance your property. Many of the styles that we have traditionally seen in timber can now be replicated in woodgrain effect PVC-u.

The Lavenham style, like many others across the range is a great example of how using different combinations of glass and panelling will result in a completely different look each time, whilst keeping to the base Lavenham layout.

Rich, elegant period door colours give a traditional design yet more authenticity and to complete the grand finish choose from a range of exquisite door furniture.

The Lavenham

The Ixworth door style follows a design that is reminiscent of many timber doors seen on 1930's properties throughout the UK.

Suffolk Collection doors have an exterior woodgrain texture and you have the choice from a number of available colours so they look, feel and perform like wood but without the same level of maintenance required. This also allows you to maintain a bright, white finish inside.

The Ixworth

The Ixworth 2

Beauty is in the detail and with that in mind the Ixworth 2 was created as a natural progression from The Ixworth.

Here 2 vertical mullions are featured instead of the one central mullion on the Ixworth.

The Sudbury

The Sudbury door follows a more classic layout and as such is one of the more versatile options in terms of its suitability for a wide spectrum of property styles.

You may choose to stick to a simple, minimalist look using clear or perhaps etched glass or alternatively add a splash of colour and creativity choosing from a vast range of available decorative glass options.

The Assington

Make a bold statement with the Assington style door, the striking panel layout with central glass results in a strong and balanced design.

Choose from natural woodgrain options or add a bold colour to really make a statement.

Chamfered edge detailing around the frame combined with a realistic woodgrain texture provides a finish that looks and feels just like timber.

Another popular choice from the complete range of 23 styles is The Newton. Retaining classic features on your property may be important. This elegant style, with its exaggerated proportions is often used in conjunction with a vertical glass design to create a really strong identity.

The Brett

Although many designs in the range are suited to period properties, The Suffolk Collection also includes a series of contemporary styles, none more contemporary than the Brett.

The Brett 2

With either clear or etched glass the Brett 2 style immediately offers a clean, modern look, particularly when used with one of the more contemporary frame colours such as the Pebble Grey, Black or Anthracite Grey.

Your Security

Ultimate security for Suffolk Doors is provided by their own unique multipoint lock system. Each door is fitted with a robust 6/12 point lock (dependent on door height) that includes a series of roller cams, hook locks, dead locks, shoot bolts and centre latch. To prevent cylinder manipulation, a 3 star high security cylinder is fitted, in keeping with British Standard requirements.

Equally, the hinge side of all Suffolk Doors are secured with 3 high security hinges. All doors are supplied with 3 keys as standard.

Your Furniture

Our elegant door handles are available in White, Chrome or Brass, all with letter plates to suit. Your selection will often be influenced by your chosen door style and the colour/finish of your door.
